Admiral's Citation Lauds Sea Cadet

Proudest cadet in the proud Rainbow Sea Cadet Corps last night was 15-year-old Able Cadet Raymond Bell, who was presented with a citation from the chief of naval staff, Vice Admiral Rollo Mainguy, commending him for saving 11-year-old Gary Quick from drowning at Beaver Lake last June. Commodore Patrick Budge made the presentation on behalf of the vice admiral. Cadet Bell plans to enter the Venture naval officer training plan in three years. Commodore Budge inspected the cadets last night and met three members of the corps who have entered HMCS Venture, R. W. Scott, David Gurr and Ronald Walker, who received their discharges from the cadet corps.

We Won—And What a Game! Jubilant Irish Coach Wires

BY RED McMILLAN
(Coach of Victoria Shamrocks)

PETERBOROUGH—Well, we have that first one under our belts—and what a game! Our boys played so well that the dirt surface, although it still was in appalling condition, didn't stop them.

They were full value for that 8-4 win and it was truly a team victory.

Every player turned in a good game and all share equally in the victory. Our centres got their share of the draws and the other forwards and the defense men worked the ball well.

Geordy Johnston played a strong game in goal (behind a solid defense) and young Alan Gills came up with a fine two-way game, getting credit for two goals and one assist and being exceptionally useful, even for him, in grabbing up loose balls.

Emphasizing the idea of the team victory was our zone defense which we used again as we had in our previous abbreviated encounter on Wednesday. With this type of defense there is no individualism and all must work in close unison with all players depending on each other.

The next game is scheduled for tonight, weather permitting, of course, and the third is set for Monday. The floor tonight was still very greasy and there were several minor accidents, any one of which could have been serious.

Probably the worst knock of all was taken by Geordy Johnston, who fell heavily as Harry Wipper charged into him after a rush and shot on goal. All ball carriers, slipping after as they tried to go around their cheeks, had trouble keeping their footing.

We can only hope conditions will improve. The Canadian Lacrosse Association has been discussing for the past two days what they would do if any more games were rained out but no decision has been reached.

With three games in four days and the heavy and treacherous surface taking a lot out of the players, rest is the big thing. Today, after breakfast at nine, we will continue our informal club badminton tournament which has been going on since we arrived without decision as everyone claims the championship.

Then we will have lunch about 1 and an afternoon rest will complete our preparation for tonight's game. Then it'll be dinner, the bus trip back to Miller Bowl, and the Trailermen. We hope it will be 2-0 after tonight.

Mrs. St. Louis, who claimed that MacLean owed her $1,600 testified during his trial that he killed his wife in "the perfect murder." MacLean admitted telling the story, but claimed he did it to "scare her" out of pressing a suit against him to recover the money. She was not in the courtroom when the verdict was announced.

JUDGE DOUBTFUL
Justice R. W. Treloven in accepting the verdict declared that he still had some doubts about MacLean's innocence. "If I'd been on the panel, I would probably have had a doubt in my mind," he said. "It may be that the accused did murder his wife, and there certainly was a lot of suspicious. But suspicion is not enough to convict any man."

SMILE, THANKS
MacLean, who had displayed no emotion during the four-day trial, smiled faintly when he heard the verdict. After a tense "Thank you" to the jury, he walked briskly from the court-

Jamaican Beauty Gives Interview

Get Out Before Boys Arrive Master's Colored Bride Told

Shawnigan School Refuses Comment

Dorothy Holtz, a beautiful Jamaican fashion model, said in Kingston, Jamaica, yesterday, that she was given five days' notice last month to get out of Shawnigan Lake School on Vancouver Island, where she was about to marry an English teacher.

The willowy, olive-skinned girl, who is also an aquatic star, said she was told by Headmaster G. P. Kaye, she must leave "before the boys come and see a colored person here."

Miss Holtz left Jamaica a month ago for Canada to marry John Michael Hewitt, a teacher at the exclusive school for boys. She was expected to stay at the school, but returned unexpectedly to Jamaica this week.

Shawnigan Lake officials last night refused to comment on a dispatch by Reuters News Service from Jamaica.

Mr. Hewitt said he would stay at the school until next summer and then will either join her in Jamaica or she will join him somewhere in Canada.

Headmaster Kaye simply said: "No comment." But he suggested that the Colonist phone J. Y. Copeman in Victoria, a governor of the school.

Mr. Copeman told a Colonist reporter: "I don't know anything about it. Good night."

Miss Holtz said that she and her fiancé went ahead with the wedding and she stayed in a small cottage until the ceremony took place. She said she plans to join her husband after he leaves his job this December.

Shawnigan Lake residents said they remembered the girl in Shawnigan Lake, but had no knowledge of a wedding between her and Mr. Hewitt.

Miss Holtz said that before leaving Jamaica she obtained permission from the Canadian authorities to live in Canada and got the "blessing" of the school authorities for her marriage to Hewitt, whom she met while he was teaching in Jamaica.

She added that the school headmaster agreed to give her away and hold a reception at his home. But at the last minute

Court Clears Youth

NEW YORK (UPI)—A 16-year-old youth was freed Friday of a charge of kicking a man to death after Judge Samuel Lebowitz called him a "typical hoodlum" and added: "I wish I could send you to jail."

The charge against Ronald Loesch was dismissed for lack of evidence, although he was held on a charge of violating probation in an assault case.

Thomas Wysokowski, it was indicted on a murder charge arising out of the same slaying. Police said the youths attacked Thomas A. Condon, 40, of Brooklyn July 10 because they were annoyed at his humming as he walked along the street.

"I Could Have Done It Sooner"

Charles Easier To Beat Second Time, Says Rocky

NEW YORK (AP)—"It was easier than I figured. He never hurt me once. I should have knocked him out sooner but I guess I was over-eager."

This was a surprising statement for the usually gallant Rocky Marciano to make after knocking out Ezzard Charles in eight rounds at Yankee Stadium Friday night to retain his world heavyweight championship.

A cut left eye and an ugly gash across the tip of his nose that was only partly concealed by a blood-soaked patch, failed to hide Rocky's good humor as he answered countless questions hurled at him by reporters.

"Yeah, I fought him differently this time," he said. "In the first fight he hit me with lots of short right hands. This time I was watching for them and hooking away. No, I didn't think he was as strong this time as the last."

Several hundred persons in the airport enclosure cheered wildly as Dulles stepped from his car.

They were teenagers, practicing under cheerleaders a welcome for American crooner Frankie Lane who was due in from Paris shortly.

"I thought they were here to greet me. What a disappointment!" said Dulles with a chuckle.

Dulles Came Close

LONDON (AP)—U.S. State Secretary Dulles mused good humoredly Friday night on the meaning of fame as he prepared to board a plane for home after his eventful conference with Foreign Secretary Eden.

Several hundred persons in the airport enclosure cheered wildly as Dulles stepped from his car.

They were teenagers, practicing under cheerleaders a welcome for American crooner Frankie Lane who was due in from Paris shortly.

"I thought they were here to greet me. What a disappointment!" said Dulles with a chuckle.

Pope's Health Improved

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, (UPI)—Pope Pius strolled briskly into a reception hall tonight and spoke with vigorous gestures for 10 minutes, showing no sign of an indisposition which caused him to interrupt a speech four times last night.

holding he had wide connections with the drug trade.

"Danny Brent was a big-time drug pusher," said a veteran police officer. "He had been for the last five years. We could never get anything on him."

One theory is that he was killed by Vancouver gunmen. Another is that hired gunmen brought from the outside fired the fatal shots.

The friend, found in a downtown hideout, a rifle by his bed, told reporters: "Police came and told me I was next on the killers' death list."

Police, however, don't share this view,

Winner and Still Champion

Rocky Marciano, battered but victorious, raises his arms in triumph after defeating Ezzard Charles to retain his world heavyweight boxing crown. Marciano knocked out Charles in the eighth round last night in Yankee Stadium, New York, after flooring him twice in earlier rounds.

Cashier Couldn't Say 'No'

WHITESVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—A quiet, $300-a-month bank cashier admitted Friday that he cashed—had—cheques worth $300,000 because "I couldn't say no."

The tiny bank of Whitesville was closed after an emergency meeting of its board of directors and cashier Bernard Barrett, 50, was arrested by the FBI.

The heavy-set, balding cashier insisted, "I didn't get any of the money. I just cashed cheques for bank customers, because they had—problems—and I couldn't say no."

Barrett said his neighbors have "been streaming into our house. All of them say they believe in me. Not a one of them has been against me."

"Most of the people I cashed the cheques for were pretty down and out. I felt sorry for them. I hope so much they will make up their bad cheques."

Sloan To Seek Terms

OTTAWA (UPI)—Chief Justice Gordon McGregor Sloan of British Columbia Friday was designated as the government's arbitrator between the railways and unions in their contract dispute that recently threatened a general rail strike.

The cabinet appointed the 56-year-old justice to write binding settlement terms in the dispute after both parties agreed to arbitration following the collapse of negotiations last month.

Chief Justice Sloan, a native of Nanaimo, was given wide powers to grant or reject any or all of the four points at issue between the railways and non-operating unions representing 145,000 workers.

The initial proposal was to give the umpire authority to lay down alternatives to any of the union demands should he find this advisable.

At the unions' insistence, this was modified to keep the arbitrator within the scope of the union demands.

Mr. Justice Sloan has a substantial background of work in the labor field on the West Coast. Since his appointment to the chief justiceship in 1944 at the age of 46, he has acted as mediator for both federal and provincial governments in B.C. strikes involving the forest and mining industries.

One of his royal commission tasks, too, was a study of the operation of the B.C. Workmen's Compensation Act.

Chief Justice Sloan is best known for his work as a one-man royal commission inquiring into ways of conserving forest resources for B.C.'s $150,000,000-a-year logging and lumber industry. His monumental 3,000-word report in 1945 set up the basis for maintaining forestry yield in that province.

Under the authority given him by order-in-council Friday, Chief Justice Sloan will have power to write his rail decisions into binding contracts. The order specifies, however, that such contracts are not to extend beyond the end of 1955.

They will replace agreements that expired last December 1.

Loser Won't Quit

NEW YORK (AP)—Ezzard Charles, smiling and unmarked in contrast to Rocky Marciano, his conqueror, said Friday night he wanted to go on fighting in fact, "I thought they would let me keep fighting at the end there."

ADMITTS ERROR

Charles admitted his mistake was to abandon the punching style he used against Marciano in their first encounter.

"I tried to do what he did to me. I tried to knock him out," he conceded, "but I was groggy, but I still had my senses. My gloves weren't touching the floor. I could have gone on fighting."

"If they had let me, I think in two more rounds I would have beat him. He was cut up pretty bad."

NO GRIPING

Charles refused to criticize the champion for what some observers thought were low blows, or for hitting after the bell.

"Guess that's just the way he fights," said Ed.

Guard Slain as Daring Bid for Freedom Fails

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP)—Dangling out the door was Miller's body.

It was not known whether Miller was shot by the trio or was hit in the hall of bullets from tower guards.

ATLANTA (AP)—Two more prisoners slithered through a sewer line Friday and escaped as the high-walled Atlanta federal penitentiary continued to be rocked by its biggest break in history.

The pair crawled through a small sewer pipe that prison officials did not know existed, apparently the path taken Wednesday by two other prisoners.

The truck was abandoned a half-mile from the prison.

Slain Man's Friend Fears He's Next on List

'Maybe the Killers Thought He Was Me'

VANCOUVER (UPI)—A terrified man, one who says he has been marked for death by Vancouver's underworld Friday told something of the life of slain Danny Brent.

Brent, a 43-year-old headwaiter in a downtown club, was found early Wednesday on the University Golf Course, his body riddled with bullets.

His death has been linked with the drug racket, and police termed it a gangland killing.

The friend, however, denied Danny was connected with the narcotic trade. Police, however, don't share this view,

He thinks Brent may have been taken for a ride in his own red convertible by mistake. "Look, Danny and I are the same age. We both wear sports clothes. Our cars are something the same."

"Now suppose the killers made a mistake. Suppose they meant me?" He said: "Somebody told the police my body would be found next."

Brent is reported to have spent his last hours in a Chinatown night club. He was there with a woman and two men.

Some patrons reported hearing a loud bang shortly after he and his companions left the club. It came from the direction of the parking lot.

"It sounded like a firecracker," said a woman who heard it. "No one investigated."

Brent's body was found dumped near the 10th green at the golf club. Blood stains were found in his car.

The marked man doesn't believe Danny Brent is reported to have spent his last hours in a Chinatown night club. He was there with a woman and two men.

"Sure, I'm scared," he told reporters. "I got a wife and I love her. I've made my will."

A chronometer is a clock with a university education—a very precise and sensitive machine for telling the time.

Ray Baines tells me about an engineer at the John Hart Dam who always stands guard over his chronometer when visitors are touring the plant, in case someone should lurch against the hair-trigger mechanism and jar it out of balance.

One day a little American boy visited the plant with his parents. He took an immediate interest in the chronometer.

"What's that for, mister?" he asked.

"That's a chronometer. It tells the time."

The little boy glanced at a wrist watch. It was a low-priced drugstore model, but obviously new and he was very proud of it.

"Good, mister," he said, comparing the timepieces. "Your chronometer is exactly right."

Friend says raisin bread is well named, because they're always raisin' the price of the stuff and lowerin' the number of raisins—although the government passed a law a while ago saying that bakers had to put a certain number of raisins in a loaf.

Some people ridiculed the law as a sample of silly bureaucratic meddling with free enterprise.

My friend tells me he bought a raisin loaf recently for 29 cents. When he reached home it struck him that the price was outrageous. He flew into a temper; decided to dissect the loaf by cutting it in wafer-thin slices, and count the raisins.

He found 37 things that deserved the name of raisins, plus six more particles that he didn't count, being uncertain whether they were slices of raisin, currants, or gnats.

A plain loaf costs 14 cents. For 37 raisins plus a pinch of spice, my friend had to pay an extra 15 cents.

As the old saying has it, these bakers certainly make more dough than they knead.

Case of the Traveling Corpse

BY MILTON K. OZAKI

(Copyright, 1954, Milton K. Ozaki. Illustrations copyright, 1954, King Features Syndicate, Inc. Illustrated by King Features Syndicate.)

"Yeah? What... a blonde?"

"A blonde and a redhead."

I said, "Seriously, boss, this is something big. I think I know where the Van Nostrand emeralds are."

"Smallwood—" The boss voice became impatient. "Cut out the guff and bring that car in. Everybody who reads the papers knows where the Van Nostrand emeralds are. They're back in the Van Nostrand vault where they belong!"

He hung up.

I was too surprised to move for a second. I patted my pocket. The case was there. I'd looked at pictures of the necklace twenty times, at least. I wasn't mistaken. It was an old-fashioned arrangement of fifteen stones, the largest of which was set in the form of a pendant. I had it in my pocket.

Dropping the phone receiver, I high-tailed it out of the restaurant and down the street to a newstand.

When I got back to the restaurant, Hollis greeted me with a relieved smile. "I thought you'd left me," she said. "What happened?"

The item was on the third page. I showed it to her. "This is what happened," I said, jabbing the item with my thumb. "Either Mrs. Van Nostrand doesn't know her own necklace—or the one you found is a beautiful, beautiful fake."

"But—" She shook her head dazedly. "—why would anyone—"

"I wish I knew," I told her. Except for two parked cars, the

"And don't think I'm not going to try to find out!" I looked at my watch. "It's time I started moving."

"I'm going with you."

"You are going home," I corrected. "You've had enough excitement for one day."

I shrugged and we went back to my roadster. She sat close beside me. As we neared the place where I'd left the Cadilly, she trembled violently and touched my arm. "Easy," I warned. "Take it easy..."

Two squad cars were parked at the curb and at least 50 people were crowded about the big blue car. The lid of the rear compartment was up and everyone was trying to look into it. As I drove past, a flash-bulb popped and two cops started pushing people back. I didn't stop.

I went to the next corner, turned and drove directly to Nick LaMonte's place. The inn was a long, ranch-type structure which looked more like a rustic country club than a gambling dive and gin mill. From what I'd heard, LaMonte did all right by himself. But that didn't fit the facts, either. If he was flush, why hadn't he paid for the car?

I pointed the roadster into the inn's driveway and stopped. Except for two parked cars, the place seemed deserted. I looked at the redhead. She was still trembling, but her lips were set and determination was written all over her pretty face.

"I'm going in," I said. "You are to stay here, right here in the car, understand?" She nodded. I took the level case out of my pocket and pushed it down between the seat cushions. "Under no circumstances come in after me," I warned. "If you hear a rumble, call a cop—but don't come dashing in by yourself."

"All right," Her words were faint, but she managed to smile.

Safeway, Retailers' Group Quarrel Over Loss Leaders

OTTAWA (CP)—A proposed formula to end loss-leader selling in the food business Friday was described by counsel for Canada Safeway Ltd. as impractical and unworkable.

The formula was placed before the restrictive trade practices commission by the Saskatchewan Retail Merchants Association and the national food division of the Retail Merchants Association of Canada.

The commission is holding final hearings on the extent and use of loss-leader selling—the sale of goods below cost to attract customers—to determine whether the practice is harmful to fair and competitive retail trade.

Under the proposal, food retailers would be obliged to sell to their competitors at a 5 or 10-per cent discount, depending on the goods, up to $300 worth of any lines offered consumers at prices below those charged by other retailers.

John A. MacAulay of Vancouver, Safeway counsel, said the formula would force those who buy merchandise efficiently to subsidize those who buy inefficiently. It was a monopolistic device which would enable some retailers to observe privately prescribed mark-ups.

A. A. Shelly of Saskatoon, representing the two merchant organizations, said the formula would enable independent retailers to remain in a competitive position with chain or department stores practicing price cutting. He said the Safeway organization is an international chain which is discriminating against independent grocers with unethical loss leader practices.

Saanich By-Election Vote Today

By-election today in Saanich will be a straight fight between former farmer Edwin Haw, running on a labor ticket, and Dr. Ronald M. Grant, a naturopathic physician, who is a member of Saanich Voters' Association.

About 16,500 Saanich residents are eligible to go to the polls.

The by-election was caused by the resignation last month of Clr. Roy H. Wooten. Successful candidate will sit for a one-year term.

Polling booths will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., with Municipal Clerk John Tribe as returning officer.

Polling stations are at Cedar Hill School, Tolmie School, Cloverdale School, Gordon Head School, Camborne Bay Scout Hall, Marigold Scout Hall, Royal Oak High School, McMoran's Pavilion, Prospect Lake School, Tillicum School and St. Martin's Hall.

Azalea Display Most Colorful

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

A display of azaleas is just about the most colorful sight it is possible to see in the spring. The plants may not be very big, but the wide range of colors now available and their ease of culture makes this shrub ideal for mass planting in any landscape.

Azaleas are splendid mixers with rhododendrons, to which they are related, either in beds, where they supply some of the colors lacking in rhododendrons, or in a border of mixed shrubs, where they are best placed well up forward. In either case, their scent will be something to be remembered, as well as their blaze of color.

PLEASING IN LAWN

A large bed of azaleas in a lawn is particularly pleasing, in its setting of dark green turf. If your lawn is healthy, showing plenty of the fine-leaved varieties of grass and no clover, the chances are that the soil is sufficiently free from lime to grow azaleas.

The preparation of the soil is comparatively simple. Simply dig out a bed to the depth of your spade, setting the soil to one side. Then mix into the sub-soil half a handful of very old manure or rough, half-rotted leaf mold, plus half a cupful of superphosphate to the square yard. Tread this down thoroughly.

Then replace the topsoil, mixing with it half a bucketful of damp peat moss and a cupful of bone meal per square yard.

The root system of the azalea is very thin and wiry, and the roots clasp the soil very closely. When you receive the plants from the nursery, the roots will be enclosed in a compact ball of soil, and the plants should be handled carefully so as not to break the ball.

Each planting hole should be made wide enough to receive the root ball comfortably, leaving a three-inch space all round. Make it deep enough to take a two-inch layer of damp peat moss at the bottom and still leave four inches above the top of the soil ball. Fill in gradually with the mixture of topsoil, peat moss and bone meal. When the job is about two-thirds completed, stop and pour about a gallon of water into the hole to settle the soil around the roots. A few drops of vitamin B1 in the water is a good precaution to take against transplanting shock. When the water has drained away, complete the filling in with loose, dry soil.

SOME FAVORITES

The Ghent hybrids are about the most satisfactory of the azaleas for outdoor work, and some of my favorites are Nancy Waterer, a lemon yellow; Unique, a brilliant orange; Davicle, a lovely pure white; Grandeur Triomphe, rich pink; Gloria Mundi, another good orange; and Coccinea speciosa, which is the same color as a Paul Crampel geranium.

Law Halts Home-Furnishing Project

Arthur Lloyd Williams' home at Langford contained most of the usual electrical appliances, including a vacuum cleaner, food-mixer, kettle, toaster and a radio. Williams possessed an electric razor. He also had $200 worth of fishing equipment.

Magistrate H. C. Hall was told in city court yesterday that all the articles had been stolen from homes in Colwood and Central Saanich during the last three years.

The accused, a truck driver, admitted seven charges of retaining stolen property worth about $1,000. He was remanded one week for sentence.

A probation report was requested by the magistrate, who also told defense counsel D. G. Sloan that arrangements will be made for a psychiatrist to examine Williams.

Police officers brought most of the loot into court. Among the property was a chest of drawers, oil lamps, a money changer, haversack, shoes, blankets, towels, pillow cases and clothing.

The offenses were discovered after Mrs. H. A. Noakes saw the accused's wife wearing one of the coats stolen in a break-in July 20 at her Island View Beach home.

The Noakes lost two women's coats, a suit, a pair of pants, a clock-radio and other property worth about $450. No charges were laid against Williams' wife.

Corporal Joseph Shepherd told court that five of the break-ins occurred in the Colwood district. The vacuum cleaner was stolen in 1952 from the home of George Edward Hall, Langford Lake.

Evidence in the Central Saanich offenses was given by Chief Fred Brownlee.

Armed with a battery of heavy books, defense lawyer James Proudfoot argued a plea of "autrefois acquit" on behalf of client Hugh Campbell, 22, of Shawnigan Lake.

Campbell is charged with obtaining credit by false pretences. An original charge of uttering a forged cheque was dismissed by Magistrate Hall. Mr. Proudfoot claimed the facts of the new charge had been contained in the original one and that it was therefore "autrefois acquit," or previously acquitted.

Magistrate Hall stated he had never heard the plea entered before in a lower court.

He listened to Mr. Proudfoot's lengthy argument and then disagreed with him. Defense counsel entered a plea of not guilty after his first bid was turned down. Campbell will face trial next Wednesday.

The charge dates back to February this year.

A charge of bigamy has been laid against the accused by Duncan RCMP. Campbell was working as a seasonal laborer at Shawnigan when he was arrested on the city charge.

It is alleged he has gone through three marriage ceremonies. Principal in the last one is said to have been a 17-year-old girl.

Campbell is being held in custody by city police.

Robert M. Berg, H.M.C.S. Naden, was fined a total of $70, or 15 days, after he pleaded guilty to two charges of driving without a license, one of purporting that another man's license was his own, and driving a car equipped with an inadequate muffler.

He was stopped by a police officer on View Street September 1 when he displayed a license which was later found to have belonged to a passenger. About a week later he was stopped by the same officer. He was charged after he failed to produce a license.

Asked why he had used another man's license in the first instance, Berg answered: "I thought I could get away with it and save a lot of trouble."

A 19-year-old youth was fined

$30, or six days, after he pleaded business purposes as a truck guilty to a careless driving charge.

"In view of your record I am going to suspend," said Magistrate A. I. Thomas also ordered him to pay $3.50 costs on each charge.

Staggered School Hours

SINCE Greater Victoria schools reopened for the new school year the number of pupils affected by the shift system has continued to increase. By the latest estimate 400 youngsters will be going to and returning from school at abnormal hours come Monday, and the worst of it is that the irregularity is apt to prevail through winter's bad weather and shortened periods of daylight. Teaching staffs and other paid officials have done the best they can to minimize the ill-effects of classroom insufficiency which is no fault of theirs, but they can't fit two pupils into space limited to one; hence the makeshift plan of staggered attendance.

In consequence the routine of several hundreds homes has been disorganized. That is bad enough, but much worse are the upsetting and retarding effects of irregularity on the children concerned. It is particularly unfortunate that the grades involved are made up of children in age groups to which the formulation of regular habits is most important—children not yet old enough to devise ways of filling in hours which in the ordinary course would and should be spent in school. It is even more deplorable that the afternoon shift of boys and girls between the ages of 7 and 10 should be kept in school until long after the other classrooms have been emptied, to make their way home in the hours of dusk or darkness when traffic conditions are at their most dangerous.

There is insufficient excuse for this situation. The defeat of a school construction by-law (for good cause, not connected with provision of needed classroom space) may have had something to do with it, but is by no means a complete explanation. Apparently there has been faulty assessment of and preparation for future classroom requirements. For the enormous expenditures on construction since the war there should not be one elementary student without a place in class in regular hours. That requirement is basic and nothing else should be undertaken until it is met.

All the authorities responsible for furnishing adequate accommodation for the elementary grades should take very good care that this sort of thing doesn't occur again a year hence.

Ripple Rock Again

RIPPLE ROCK is in the news again, happily this time not in its dreaded role of destroyer of shipping but instead as the object of potential elimination. It has been discussed in this latter guise frequently of course and in fact much official money has been spent fruitlessly in attempts to remove it and thus guarantee the safety of the Seymour Narrows channel to all B.C. navigators. Now a private firm is reported as willing to expend its own funds in yet one more effort. The news should please all coastal shipowners and the men who sail this narrow waterway.

Nothing would delight the latter more than to have this hazard removed from their minds once and forever. Up till now Ripple Rock has resisted every effort to blast it out of existence or at least reduce its shipping menace to insignificant levels, principally because of the rip tides which make such operations difficult. Now an American firm has evolved a mobile drilling platform, possibly the secret of success, and wants permission to get to grips with the rock on a no-cure-no-pay basis.

They should be given a free hand to go ahead. An obstacle which over a period of 75 years has been responsible for the wrecking or damaging of nearly 40 ships and been responsible for the loss of almost 100 lives is certainly due for elimination. Dominion authorities have tried hard, at the expenditure of no little time, money and effort, to free Seymour Narrows of this perpetual hazard. It is not their fault that failure has been the only result to date. But if a private engineering firm thinks it can do the job on the terms of no pay unless Ripple Rock disappears out of sight down beyond the danger point—and there are no reservations and the price for success is not exorbitant—then Ottawa might well give ready assent. Coastal shipping men everywhere would heave a welcome sigh of relief if the rock were removed.

Household Familiars

AIRCRAFT which although of 400-mile-an-hour category were described as "relics" led a fly past over the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral this week. That such should be an appropriate enough term for a plane only some 15 years old in design is its own sharp reminder of the tremendous advances made in aviation during the past decade. And in the realm of fighter aircraft it is primarily speed that governs the degree of obsolescence.

Yet in reverse progression these self-same relics have catapulted themselves into historical prominence at a rate much faster than many much older reminders. They were the Hurricane and Spitfire aircraft, names as household in familiarity as the Victory or the Golden Hind; and with equal warrant. Fourteen years ago this month they were in the van in English skies just as they were this week, at the climax of the Battle of Britain—one of the great conflicts of history. It was the Hurricane and Spitfire which saved the day for justice and freedom.

Each year now and rightly too these fateful hours are commemorated all over the Commonwealth as Battle-of-Britain memorial celebrations are held. Some of the Churchillian "few" for example will meet quietly tonight in Victoria, to recall the battle shared by many Canadian airmen and toast the memory of former comrades. And without a doubt the Hurricanes and Spitfires now regarded as relics will be the object of fond and grateful memory.

The Real Substance

BECAUSE the occasional naval seaman gets his name on the police docket there is a tendency on the part of some people to over-emphasize delinquency of this kind. In fact of course the proportion of thoughtless youthful transgressors wearing an RCN uniform is exceedingly small in comparison with the number of men serving in this area. The vast bulk of naval personnel are kin in every way to the normal respectable majority of the community.

A much truer estimate of naval quality may be drawn from the generous gesture of the ship's company of HMCS Ontario in donating a station wagon to the Solarium this week. The gift is as handsome as the spirit behind it and undoubtedly will prove a boon to the management and staff of that institution. This fine action is a reminder that sailors are a warm-hearted group whose merits far outweigh the misdeeds of a trifling minority among their ranks. When it comes to the milk of human kindness the men in deep-sea blue are hard to beat, and the present is but one more instance of the readiness with which they give to those in need.

Interpreting the News

Snub—or Warning?

By J. M. ROBERTS, Jr.
Associated Press News Analyst

A GREAT to-do is being made over the fact that State Secretary Dulles went abroad to discuss matters vital to the future of Europe without including Paris among his ports of call. Whether or not the strategy is a good one remains to be seen. The object is clear.

France, since knocking out the European Defense Community plan which she herself devised three years ago as a control over German re-armament, has left the initiative of what now must be done entirely up to others.

It was naturally expected that, having rejected EDC and knowing that Germany was bound to be re-armed by hook or crook, she would come up with new proposals, if only to protect her own position.

But Premier Mendes-France apparently felt that his proposals for revisions of EDC at the Brussels conference, before the French assembly voted, should make France's position clear enough.

He had found himself facing unanimous opposition by the other proposed members at that conference, and after the vote France found herself under the severest criticism from even her best friends. She sat back to see if they now would propose something to which she could agree.

Foreign Secretary Eden of Britain has made a proposal for including Germany in the 1948 Brussels treaty, which has never meant much, but which does contain an automatic commitment from Britain to come to the aid of any attacked member. That does something to assuage French fears that, in EDC, she would have been committed to something that a resurgent Germany could control.

But fragmentary reports after Eden visited Paris indicate France's continued reluctance to do anything at all about re-arming Germany, although Mendes-France is required under the post-EDC assembly situation to submit new proposals when that body reconvenes, November 3.

In this connection, Dulles went to Europe suddenly to see whether it was possible to obtain anything better than the Eden plan, to see just what Germany was willing to promise in the way of submitting to restrictions on her re-armament, and to convince France that, since something is going to be done, she'd better get in on it.

Paris has taken it as a shortsighted snub, and this has been echoed in segments of the British and American press. It is more of a calculated warning, an effort to get her back in the fold, where she must be if any European defense program is to be successful.

Looking Back

By FRANK KELLEY

CHATTING with traveling British naval and military personnel occasionally aboard Empress liners on the way up from William Head to Victoria during years prior to the beginning of the last war, now and then one heard what appeared to be off-the-record statements and as a result was not surprised if asked to treat certain matters in confidence—a not uncommon request under some circumstances.

Those were the days of the unpredictable 'thirties on the international scene when there was so much wild talk fomented by the Nazis, and a bit of just as poisonous, if not such noisy, propaganda spilling from other just as dangerous sources, threatening to upset the greater part of a world eager to shape a course of peace and follow certain paths for the ultimate good of all mankind.

Although trained in the perfection of smart naval and military practices, there was no apparent inclination on the part of those men to exult over their attainments of rank. It was obvious they would have been satisfied to forego, as they went about studying a troublesome world, anything like military glory, the promise of which might be stimulating the dictators of the Rhineland.

They seemed to have discovered that war potential was not confined to the Nazis. In their contacts they had sensed ominous implications everywhere they touched in their travels between the British Isles and Japan. India was not as docile as it might appear on the surface; Malaya was a potential furnace, while China and Japan had all the ingredients stewing for a mess that might startle the world overnight.

Part of their duties in those up-and-down years had to do with inspecting progress at the defense of Britain's Far Eastern possessions; but what impressed me most was the hope expressed by those same Britishers that the international situation would so resolve itself that the German people might through some quirk of fate be found fighting, if there had to be fighting, as an ally of Britain.

They did not want any part of Hitler or the Prussian philosophy. Instead of being an enemy, Germany, through racial derivations, should be the natural ally of Britain. It had been unfortunate, they contended, that the Allies of the Great War had taken the African colonies away from her, as the act had given the war-seekers something through which another war of possible conquest might be stimulated—in a plan to acquire the Ukraine, an idea which was evidently being seriously toyed with by German leaders 20 years ago.

Most of those things, not so well remembered maybe, flooded through the "think tank" when France's National Assembly rejected the European Defense Community to the great dismay of Western European capitals as well as North America.

What the ultimate fate of EDC may be it is still not too fantastic for one who heard those British officers outline some hoped-for possibilities which would ally Germany with Britain and other Western lands in a pact predicated on stable world conditions for a long time.

Apparently some of the same thinking Britishers who expressed themselves under wraps on Empress liners at times are still thinking in the same groove and hoping to see a better Germany lined up with Western European neighbors for the good of the world, a consummation apparently much desired by a lot of British people.

Reports from Ottawa

FROM the time the new Japanese-Canadian trade agreement was first broached, there was great apprehension in this country lest "cheap" Japanese goods flood Canadian markets and put our workers out of jobs.

It's too soon to state categorically that such won't be the case, but the most recent figures do not indicate that result. Indeed, they show that Canadian-Japanese trade is even more heavily weighted in our favor than it was in 1953.

The trade agreement, under which the two countries granted each other most-favored-nation tariff treatment, went into effect June 7 after Parliament had ratified it over protests from manufacturers of textiles, toys and other products.

The latest figures on imports from Japan are for the first six months of the year, and include only three weeks after the effective date of the trade agreement. They show imports valued at $6,650,000, compared with $5,727,000 in the corresponding period of 1953. Since imports have been running between $12,000,000 and $14,000,000 annually for several years now, the situation as of July 1 was normal.

What is really startling is the way exports to Japan are zooming. In 1950 they totaled a mere $20,000,000. In 1952 they hit $102,000,000, and then rose to $118,000,000 last year. On the basis of figures for the first seven months of this year they may reach $175,000,000 in 1954.

By July 1 we'd sold Japan $30,000,000 worth of wheat, compared with $12,000,000 in the same period last year. Harley exports rose from $3,000,000 to $12,000,000.

While it's gratifying to see this market developing for our harder-to-sell grains, it's obvious that this isn't a healthy situation for the Japanese economy. For all that the trade figures disclose, the Japanese will do well to sell us $15,000,000 worth of their goods this year, even with the tariff bars lowered.

For the last nine years the Japanese economy has floated in a flood of American dollars—first occupation dollars, and then Korean War dollars. That flood is rapidly receding now, exposing the alarming facts of Japan's economic position.

Her exports no longer earn her enough money to buy the food she must import to feed a population of 85,000,000—up 27 per cent from pre-war—even at living standards which have already declined to the average level of 1935.

Her trade deficit with all countries last year was $1,135,000,000. It will be even greater this year, and unless the present trend is reversed she will have exhausted her dollar reserves by mid-1955. What of Canada's booming exports then?

The solution to the problem is trade, not aid. Canada's allies, and particularly the United States, will have to do as much as Canada has done to admit Japanese goods. And perhaps before Japan is back on her economic feet we'll all have to do more.

The only alternative is to watch Japan turn to China and Russia to sell her goods. And Japan's economic dependence on her Communist neighbors would be the first step toward the liquidation of Japan as a bastion of Western democracy in the Pacific. In terms of Canadian and American national security, that would be a catastrophe.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

IN the matter of courtesy we can apparently overdo it with elderly woman. Times have changed. Just as I entered a revolving door in one of the big stores the other day I noted a little old lady about to nip in on her side of it. The door was spinning just a trifle fast. As I stepped in, I took hold of the bar and set my posterior against the rear panel to slow the door down.

The old lady nipped in. She gave me an indignant glance. And with a strength that struck me as astonishing, she gave the door a solid shove that sent me practically sprawling out my side.

I looked back. She had set the door really spinning, and had emerged very nimbly out on to the street. She too was looking back at me. First, she glared. Then, in response to my astonished expression, she impulsively grinned.

Since it is the newspaperman's duty to investigate all phenomena, I stepped back into the revolving door and came out to her, lifting my hat politely.

"Sorry," she said, contritely. "You mad about something?" I enquired.

"Yes I am!" she stated emphatically, shifting her parcels in her arms. "I came down town shopping this morning. And everybody has been treating me as if I were a helpless old woman."

She stared at me a moment, in challenge. I held my face steady, for she really was a rather frail old party.

"The darn bus driver," she said, "got up out of his seat to help me onto the bus. A middle-aged woman jumped up to give me her seat. I went first to the glove counter. And what does the girl do? She hurries and gets a chair for me to sit on. It's been like that all morning. Everybody hopping around, making room for me, taking my elbow . . . And then you slow down the door for me!"

"It was going too fast for me," I submitted.

She gave me a sly smile.

"I felt fine when I got up this morning," she said. "Haven't felt better for weeks. Then everybody treats me like an old woman . . . I'm all in!"

She tottered off across the intersection, against the red light, full of battle, defying the years.

Under the Dome

By RAY BAINES

Colonist Legislative Reporter

POLITICS being what it is and cynics thinking as they do, a minor incident in the life of British Columbia politics came as a bit of a surprise to many last week.

A man in a high position in a Social Credit constituency association quit because he was 'mad at the government. And what's more he quit because he disagreed with the way the government handed a forest management license to a rival firm.

How come, the cynics say? Could it be that the government handled the question on its merits and according to policy? No, there must be some other explanation.

G. R. Dent, president of Squamish Towing & Contracting Ltd., and president of the Lillooet Social Credit Constituency Association, announced last week that he would resign his Social Credit seat because he did not like the way the government had handled the Empire Mills Ltd. forest management license application.

Mr. Dent's firm was one of two which each offered to pay $500,000 for a third of the timber rights that Empire Mills received for nothing through the management license. Their offers were made through Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson, vigorous opponent of the forest management license system in general and of the provisional approval of Empire Mills' application in particular.

Mr. Dent was among a group of independent operators in the Squamish area who appealed the government approval of the Empire Mills' application and attended a cabinet hearing called to hear their objections.

The Lillooet Social Credit was championed by the Lillooet Liberal throughout and the government's forest management license policy was blasted from one end of the province to the other. To people used to divisions on party lines rather than issues, here was a new twist.

People actually battling over the merits or demerits of a specific issue? Sacred against Sacred? The cynics are surmising to their corners for new evidence. Their theory is that in politics no one ever decides whether a thing is right or wrong, only whether it is right or left. This has been a bitter blow to them.

They'll have an answer. The whole thing was cooked, they'll say. The government deliberately lined up against one of its own kind just to prove it was free of patronage.

Or this one: The Social Credit was really a Liberal in disguise who hoped to incur some favors and then expose the government who gave them.

Whatever happens, the cynics insist, it's all party politics. Everyone knows a government builds roads to get votes, hands out land leases in exchange for party funds, and gives forest management licenses only to party members.

If the president of Empire Mills turned out to be a Liberal, the cynics would be set back for years.

THE cartoonists who had their pencils sharpened and the humorists who had their wits in the same condition of readiness were disappointed recently to hear that the government had dropped the idea of forming a "B.C. air force."

It was a natural. Air Marshal P. A. Gagliardi in a braided grey-blue uniform with S.O.C.R.E.D. tabs up? Reconnaissance forays over the Alberta border? It could have gone on and on.

What happened was that the public works minister revived an old theory that the province might save money by pooling its aircraft and charging rentals to the various public works, forestry and survey officials who use them. At the present time, public works has three of its own, surveys have some and forestry rents planes from a private operator on a yearly contract basis.

It turned out that unless the province owned at least 15 aircraft of its own, the pool idea would increase rather than cut costs. One official called it a "pipe dream."

Ontario pools its aircraft but it owns 48. Saskatchewan also has a pool but its CCF government is in the commercial flying business and supplements the cost of government use of planes by flying freight and so on.

But it would have had possibilities, wouldn't it?

The soul, secure in her existence smiles
At the drawn dagger, and defies its point;
The stars shall fade away, the sun himself
Grow dim with age, and nature sink

But thou shalt flourish in immortal youth,
Unhurt amidst the war of elements,
The wreck of matter and the crash
Of worlds.

U.K., U.S. Favor Germany in NATO

LONDON (AP)—Britain and the United States agreed Friday night on quick action to bring West Germany into the Atlantic alliance on a basis of full equality. France has promised support, in principle at least, for this move.

State Secretary Dulles and French Foreign Minister Schuman, who met in London, agreed on the move.

Officials here doubt whether the two meetings will be enough to settle all the delicate questions involved. Canada will not accept German rearmament without safeguards, informants said in Ottawa Friday.

NATO headquarters in Paris promptly announced that the member countries would meet about October 13 to take up the problem.

The U.K. foreign office also announced Britain will issue invitations at once for a meeting here the week after next of Canada, the United States, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Payroll Gifts Only Answer, Says Chest

"Community Chest needs cannot be filled by out-of-pocket donations," said Allan Leith, head of the Chest's industrial and commercial division, to fellow directors of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

Mr. Leith said that payroll deduction support was needed. "That's the only way we can make our target," he said.

Last year when payroll deduction was tried for the first time the Chest raised a record sum, but did not hit its target.

"This year we hope to develop this system of collection, and we want to appeal for the support of all employers," he said.

The Chest hopes every Victorian will give 50 cents for each of the 16 member agencies.

Chamber directors undertook to ask their 700 members to make the way easy for canvassers on payroll deduction.

Troupe Seeks TV For TB Patients

The Jerry Gosley Smile Show has launched an appeal for funds to purchase a television set for the TB patients of the Villa St. Joseph's Hospital.

"It is hoped the Victoria public and service clubs and organizations will respond as readily as they did three years ago when the Smile Show made a similar appeal for the Royal Jubilee Hospital," Mr. Gosley told the Colonist last night.

At that time $7,100 was raised in six weeks.

Units at Work Point Barracks have already started the ball rolling in the new appeal, with a donation of $85.

The Royal Canadian Army Signal Corps has offered to install the set free of charge and Sims Laboratories at Sidney has promised a free TV antenna. Tom Watkins of Acme Press has offered to do all required printing.

Bernard Nixon has donated use of the Fox Theatre for Sunday, October 31, when the first 450 donors of $1 or more will be invited to attend a performance by the Jerry Gosley Smile Show.

All donations should be sent to Mrs. Laura Chaplin, the Villa St. Joseph's Hospital. Those who wish their donations collected should phone 2-7792 between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m.

He Was Prepared for Spanking

Eugene Hart, 11, of Brooklyn, stowaway on the liner United States, rushes out to greet his mother, Mrs. Hildegard Hart, on the ship's return to New York from Europe. The boy had originally intended going to a movie, but visited the vessel instead, just before it left the port. The boat sailed with Eugene still aboard, and he made the round trip as a wanted guest of the steamship company. He thought he was due for a spanking when he returned home.—(Central Press Canadian.)

Helicopters May Link City, Airport

A helicopter service from Patricia Bay Airport, to be called Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd., may be operating here within a year, it was learned yesterday.

Ted Henson, 28, of 3884 Shelbourne Street, said he was one of a three-man Victoria and Mainland group that has applied for a license to be approved by the Air Transport Board at Ottawa.

Decision on a license will be made known from Ottawa after October 7, deadline for submissions concerning the application.

The group—which already has one helicopter stationed elsewhere, has not yet approached air transport authorities regarding use of Patricia Bay as a helicopter site.

Choose Your Party, Conservatives Told

The Progressive Conservative Association of British Columbia has told its members to choose between the association and the federal riding organizations which are being formed as a result of the rebellion against national party leader George Drew.

The association has announced that any member joining the B.C. association and its constituent and affiliated bodies will forfeit membership in the federal riding organizations.

James George, supporter of provincial leader Deane Finlayson, said last night the action means "everybody has to make up his mind where he stands."

But Major-General G. R. Pearkes, V.C. MP, called the action "foolish," because provincial P.C. strength can only be increased by federal advances, which he said are indicated.

Loose Ball Escapes Detection

Geordy Johnston, Victoria Shamrocks' goalkeeper, has just stopped sizzling drive from unidentified Peterborough player when this picture was taken in Wednesday night's Mann Cup game which was postponed due to rain early in second quarter with Rocks leading Trailermen, 4-3. Ball is loose in front of goal.

but Jake Proctor, extreme right, appears as if he had just spotted it. Bob Monaghan, No. 19, is keeping an eye on Petes' Don Ashbee, No. 10, at left of Johnston. Jackie Northup, No. 13, is blocking out Peterborough shooter.

Rocks Hustle, Strong Defense Earns 8-4 Victory in Opener better opportunities here Friday night as they grabbed a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven Mann Cup final with Peterborough Trailermen by scoring an 8-4 win in Miller Bowl. About 4,000 fans saw the teams finally get started after Wednesday's scheduled opener had been postponed early in the second quarter and Thursday's opener rained out completely.

Second game is scheduled for tonight and the third for Monday night, weather permitting. The hustling Shamrocks broke in fast from the start and racked up a 2-0 lead in the first quarter. They outscored Petes again in the second quarter to take a 5-2 lead into

CHECKING CLOSE
Despite speedy play most of the way, the checking was close and the two clubs got away with some slashing as players stepped into each other hard at times as they tried to soften each other up. Penalties hit the Trailermen harder as they were assessed eight of the 12 handed out by referees Joe Murphy and Lou Vipond.

Outstanding goalkeeping by Geordy Johnston had much to do with the Victoria win. He was almost uncanny in some of his stops, getting in front of point-blank drives in each quarter and having no chance at all on the four that beat

VETERANS BELOW PAR
Bobby Allan, with a goal and an assist, was the only Trailerman to get more than one point. Some of the veterans were a bit below par for this one but the two replacements they used, Jim Bradshaw and Tony D'Amico, turned in fine efforts. The Petes didn't use Jim McNulty, leading OLA scorer who is their third replacement and Denny Peterson, a 45-goal man this season, was out with an injured elbow.

Both clubs were a bit off the mark in the early going and it wasn't until the five-minute mark that a goal was scored. Gill got it, taking a free throw when illegally checked and blazing a knee-high shot past Wootton.

Victoria's Arnie Duggan and Petes' Don Ashbee went off together for roughing but no penalty was assessed. The Rocks failed to cash in on a penalty to Ashbee early in the second quarter although Jack Bionda almost scored. Then Curly Mason took a running pass from Ashbee to beat Johnston from the edge of the crease.

At this stage, Harry Piper, Allan Curtis, Bob Thorpe and Lou Nickle formed a dangerous attack for Petes but Johnston kept kicking them out. He also beat Mason and Fitzgerald before Wipper evened the score at 2-2.

A fluke goal, batted in by Mason as he attempted to give Wootton a hand when the goalie went out to block Gill's shot put the Rocks ahead again. Two minutes later, Booth whistled in a screened shot from the side and 24 seconds after that, Ted O'Hearn a pass for a goal to leave it 3-2 at the half.

Allan had a good try for Petes as the third quarter opened, then Jack Northup wiggled out of a corner to blast one past Wootton for 6-2. Mason was off for slashing when Archie Browning made it certain by scoring on the add-man play, combining smartly with O'Hearn and scoring from close range.

PLAY ROUGHER
Play roughened up and the Trailermen came back with Allan scoring and then setting up O'Hearn for Peterborough's fourth goal late in the quarter. Only three goals down, the Petes had a chance but they couldn't break through again as the Rocks got tougher defensively and Johnston continued his great play. Penalties disrupted play but all Peterborough hope ended at 7-3, when Bionda rifled one in on a play with Gill. Johnston was hurt as Wipper crashed into him and play was stopped while he recovered. Rocks stalled effectively, being called once, to protect a well-earned margin.

Judge Predicts Bright Career With Navy for Armed Robber

Although 20-year-old naval rating P. A. Robertson was found guilty of armed robbery by a Criminal Assize Court jury yesterday, Mr. Justice A. M. Manson said he foresaw a promising future for the young sailor in the navy.

"Good men have risen from the ranks and you look like one who might do just that," he told Robertson after releasing him on probation of good conduct on his own recognizance for a period of 12 months.

"I hope you remain in the navy," the assize court judge told him. "After all, the navy is the senior service and one to which it is an honor to belong."

"The world is with you," the judge said. "You are a young man. You are a young man. You are a young man."

Mr. Justice Manson warned Robertson against drinking. "You realize what booze did to you on this occasion. Even here you got very pretty muddled, you know," he said.

"I am sure that had you not been under liquor, you would not have done what you did."

In handing in the recommendation, the judge said Robertson was a "good boy" and a "good sailor."

Mr. Justice Manson said "You feel exactly as I do. I feel he wouldn't have done this if he hadn't been drinking."

We Won—And What a Game! Jubilant Irish Coach Wires

BY RED McILLAN
(Coach of Victoria Shamrocks)

PETERBOROUGH—Well, we have that first one under our belts—and what a game! Our boys played so well that the dirt surface, although it still was in appalling condition, didn't stop them.

They were full value for that 8-4 win and it was truly a team victory.

Every player turned in a good game and all share equally in the victory. Our centres got their share of the draws and the other forwards and the defense-men worked the ball well.

Geordy Johnston played a strong game in goal (behind a solid defense) and young Alan Gill came up with a fine two-way game, getting credit for two goals and one assist and being exceptionally useful, even for him, in grabbing up loose balls.

Emphasizing the idea of the team victory was our zone defense which we used again as we had in our previous abbreviated encounter on Wednesday. With this type of defense there is no individualism and all must work in close unison with all players depending on each other.

The next game is scheduled for tonight, weather permitting.

Husband Acquitted Of Drowning Wife

WELLAND, Ont. (UPI)—Scoutmaster Bruce MacLean was acquitted yesterday of charges he drowned his wife. Immediately after he was freed of the murder charge MacLean was rearrested on fraud charges brought by the jilted girl friend who was the government's star witness in his murder trial.

An all-male jury decided after deliberating for three hours that the handsome 23-year-old steelworker was telling the truth when he claimed his wife, Betty, fell out of their canoe on an outing in August, 1953. Police had charged MacLean with deliberately tipping over the canoe in the hope that his wife, who could not swim, would drown.

SMILE, THANKS

MacLean, who had displayed no emotion during the four-day trial, smiled faintly when he heard the verdict. After a tense "Thank you" to the jury, he walked briskly from the courtroom, but was taken into custody minutes later to answer the fraud charges brought by Mrs. Sylvia Davies St. Louis. Mrs. St. Louis, who claimed that MacLean owed her $1,600 testified during his trial that he boasted to her that he had killed his wife in "the perfect murder." MacLean admitted telling the story, but claimed he did it to "scare her" out of pressing a suit against him to recover the money. She was not in the courtroom when the verdict was announced.

JUDGE DOUBTFUL

Justice R. W. Treleaven in accepting the verdict declared that he still had some doubts about MacLean's innocence. "If I'd been on the panel, I would probably have had a doubt in my mind," he said. "It may be that the accused did murder his wife, and there certainly was a lot of suspicious. But suspicion is not enough to convict any man."

Jamaican Beauty Gives Interview

Get Out Before Boys Arrive Master's Colored Bride Told

Shawnigan School Refuses Comment

Dorothy Holtz, a beautiful Jamaican fashion model, said in Kingston, Jamaica, yesterday, that she was given five days' notice last month to get out of Shawnigan Lake School on Vancouver Island, where she was about to marry an English teacher.

The willowy, olive-skinned girl, who is also an aquatic star, said she was told by Headmaster G. P. Kaye, she must leave "before the boys come and see a colored person here."

Miss Holtz left Jamaica a month ago for Canada to marry John Michael Hewitt, a teacher at the exclusive school for boys. She was expected to stay at the school, but returned unexpectedly to Jamaica this week.

Shawnigan Lake officials last night refused to comment on a despatch by Reuters News Service from Jamaica.

Mr. Hewitt said he would stay at the school until next summer and then will either join her in Jamaica or she will join him somewhere in Canada.

Headmaster Kaye simply said: "No comment." But he suggested that the Colonist phone J. Y. Copeman in Victoria, a governor of the school.

Mr. Copeman told a Colonist reporter: "I don't know anything about it. Good night."

Miss Holtz said that she and her fiancé went ahead with the wedding and she stayed in a small cottage until the ceremony took place. She said she plans to join her husband after he leaves his job this December.

Shawnigan Lake residents said they remembered the girl in Shawnigan Lake, but had no knowledge of a wedding between her and Mr. Hewitt.

Miss Holtz said that before leaving Jamaica she obtained permission from the Canadian authorities to live in Canada and got the "blessing" of the school authorities for her marriage to Hewitt, whom she met while he was teaching in Jamaica.

She added that the school headmaster agreed to give her away and hold a reception at his home. But at the last min-

Dulles Came Close

LONDON (AP)—U.S. State Secretary Dulles missed good humoredly Friday night on the meaning of fame as he prepared to board a plane for home after his eventful conference with Foreign Secretary Eden.

Several hundred persons in the airport enclosure cheered wildly as Dulles stepped from his car.

They were teenagers, practicing under cheerleaders a welcome for American crooner Frankie Laine who was due in from Paris shortly.

"I thought they were here to greet me. What a disappointment!" said Dulles with a chuckle.

Pope's Health Improved

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (UPI)—Pope Pius strided briskly into a reception hall tonight and spoke with vigorous gestures for 10 minutes, showing no sign of an indisposition which caused him to interrupt a speech four times last night.

holding he had wide connections with the drug trade.

"Danny Brent was a big-time drug pusher," said a veteran police officer. "He had been for the last five years. We could never get anything on him."

One theory is that he was killed by Vancouver gunmen. Another is that hired gunmen brought from the outside fired the fatal shots.

The friend, found in a downtown hideout, a rifle by his bed, told reporters: "Police came and told me I was next on the killers' death list."

Winner and Still Champion

Rocky Marciano, battered but victorious, raises his arms in triumph after defeating Ezzard Charles to retain his world heavyweight boxing crown. Marciano knocked out Charles in the eighth round last night in Yankee Stadium, New York, after flooring him twice in earlier rounds.

I Could Have Done It Sooner

Charles Easier To Beat Second Time, Says Rocky

NEW YORK (AP)—"It was easier than I figured. He never hurt me once. I should have knocked him out sooner but I guess I was over-eager."

This was a surprising statement for the usually gallant Rocky Marciano to make after knocking out Ezzard Charles in eight round at Yankee Stadium Friday night to retain his world heavyweight championship.

A cut left eye and an ugly gash across the tip of his nose that was only partly concealed by a blood-soaked patch, failed to hide Rocky's good humor as he answered countless questions hurled at him by reporters.

"Yeah, I fought him differently this time," he said. "In the first fight he hit me with lots of short right hands. This time I was watching for them and hooking away. No, I didn't think he was as strong this time as the last."

Guard Slain as Daring Bid for Freedom Fails

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP)—Three convicts, holding a guard as hostage, rammed a milk truck through the gates of Nevada state prison Friday as lower guards blazed away with rifles.

Some 350 other prisoners quietly watched the stark bolt for freedom which ended in the death of the guard and quick recapture of the prisoners.

The trio rushed the milk truck and forced Driver Guard George Miller to crash the steel mesh rear gate.

The truck was abandoned a half-mile from the prison.

Dangling out the door was Miller's body.

It was not known whether Miller was shot by the trio or was hit in the back of bullets from tower guards.

ATLANTA (AP)—Two more prisoners slithered through a sewer line Friday and escaped as the high-walled Atlanta federal penitentiary continued to be rocked by its biggest break in history.

The pair crawled through a small sewer pipe that prison officials did not know existed, apparently the path taken Wednesday by two other prisoners who are still at large.

Loser Won't Quit

NEW YORK (AP)—Ezzard Charles, smiling and unmarked in contrast to Rocky Marciano, his conqueror, said Friday night he wanted to go on fighting—in fact, "I thought they would let me keep fighting at the end there."

Charles admitted his mistake was to abandon the punching style he used against Marciano in their first encounter.

"I tried to do what he did to me—I tried to knock him out. At the knockout, Charles conceded, he was groggy, but I still had my senses. My gloves weren't touching the floor."

Charles refused to criticize the champion for what some observers thought were low blows, or for hitting after the bell.

"Guess that's just the way he fights," said Ez.

Cashier Couldn't Say 'No'

WHITESVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—A quiet, $300-a-month bank cashier admitted Friday that he cashed bad cheques worth $500,000 because "I couldn't say no."

The tiny bank of Whitesville was closed after an emergency meeting of its board of directors and cashier Bernard Barrett, 50, was arrested by the FBI.

The heavy-set, balding cashier insisted: "I didn't get any of the money. I just cashed cheques for bank customers, because they had problems—and I couldn't say no."

Barrett said his neighbors have "been streaming into our house. All of them say they believe in me. Not a one of them has been against me."

"Most of the people I cashed the cheques for were pretty down and out. I felt sorry for them. I hope so much they will make up their bad cheques."

Sloan To Seek Terms

OTTAWA (UPI)—Chief Justice Gordon McGregor Sloan of British Columbia Friday was designated as the government's arbitrator between the railways and unions in their contract dispute that recently threatened a general rail strike.

The cabinet appointed the 56-year-old justice to write binding settlement terms in the dispute after both parties agreed to arbitration following the collapse of negotiations last month.

Chief Justice Sloan, a native of Nanaimo, was given wide powers to grant or reject any or all of the four points at issue between the railways and non-operating unions representing 145,000 workers.

The initial proposal was to give the umpire authority to lay down alternatives to any of the union demands should he find this advisable.

At the unions' insistence, this was modified to keep the arbitrator within the scope of the union demands.

Mr. Justice Sloan has a substantial background of work in the labor field on the West Coast. Since his appointment to the chief justiceship in 1944 at the age of 46, he has acted as mediator for both federal and provincial governments in B.C. strikes involving the forest and mining industries.

One of his royal commission tasks, too, was a study of the operation of the B.C. Workmen's Compensation Act.

Chief Justice Sloan is best known for his work as a one-man royal commission inquiring into ways of conserving forest resources for B.C.'s $150,000,000-a-year logging and lumber industry. His monumental 3,000,000-word report in 1945 set up the basis for maintaining forestry yield in that province.

Under the authority given him by order-in-council Friday, Chief Justice Sloan will have power to write his rail decisions into binding contracts. The order specifies, however, that such contracts are not to extend beyond the end of 1955.

They will replace agreements that expired last December 1.

Slain Man's Friend Fears He's Next on List

'Maybe the Killers Thought He Was Me'

VANCOUVER (UPI)—A terrified man, one who says he has been marked for death by Vancouver's underworld Friday told something of the life of slain Danny Brent.

Brent, a 43-year-old headwaiter in a downtown club, was found early Wednesday on the University Golf Course, his body riddled with bullets.

His death has been linked with the drug racket, and police termed it a gangland killing.

The friend, however, denied Danny was connected with the narcotic trade.

Police, however, don't share this view,

holding he had wide connections with the drug trade.

"Danny Brent was a big-time drug pusher," said a veteran police officer. "He had been for the last five years. We could never get anything on him."

One theory is that he was killed by Vancouver gunmen. Another is that hired gunmen brought from the outside fired the fatal shots.

The friend, found in a downtown hideout, a rifle by his bed, told reporters: "Police came and told me I was next on the killers' death list."

He thinks Brent may have been taken for a ride in his own red convertible by mistake.

"Look, Danny and I are the same age. We both wear sports clothes. Our cars are something the same."

"Now suppose the killers made a mistake. Suppose they meant me?" he said. "Somebody told the police my body would be found next."

Brent is reported to have spent his last hours in a Chinatown night club. He was there with a woman and two men. Some patrons reported hearing a loud bang shortly after he and his companions left the club. It came from the direction of the parking lot.

"It sounded like a firecracker," said a woman who heard it. "No one investigated."

Brent's body was found dumped near the 10th green at the golf club. Blood stains were found in his car.

The marked man doesn't believe Danny was a time-wasting boy, but he's scared. "Sure, I'm scared," he told reporters. "I got a wife and I love her. I've made my will."
